

I am very unhappy to learn that the FCC is not being consumer proactive here. As a typical early adopter of new technology the restriction will prevent technologies that were not thought by the broadcast industry, I understand that copy protection is an important issue, but to downgrade a signal is hogwash, I have a replay tv and i watch shows on there that i would not be able to watch otherwise while i am out. I can even understand the elimination of commercial skip on the first play of a title, but to destroy such a convenience would mean that i would no longer be able to watch my favorite shows in the quality that i have set up in my living space. I am very disappointed about this latest political undertaking.
